A BUS SERVICE WILL BE IN OPERATION TO TRANSPORT WALKERS TO CAHERAGH. THE BUS WILL DEPART FROM THE PLAYGROUND AT CORK ROAD AT 1.30PM.

Caheragh to Skibbereen Protest Walk

On the 30th of September 1846 between 800 and 1000 desperate men, working on the Road Relief scheme at Caheragh, walked to Skibbereen to protest about late payment of wages. Sadly, just a few weeks later, one of the early deaths of the Famine was of a man working on the Caheragh Relief Scheme. His inquest found that he had died of starvation due to the negligence of the Board of Works. The sponsored walk will finish at the playground at Skibbereen where there will be more information about this tragic episode of Skibbereen's history and performances by local musicians.

CONTACT: Michael Thornhill 086 8521025 Sponsorship forms available from Thornhill Electrical, Bridge St, Skibbereen. Contact No. 028 22316.

Visualizing the Unspeakable; An Unresolved Dilemma for Irish Artists.

Art historian Catherine Marshall will present an illustrated lecture addressing the scarcity of images of the Famine in Ireland, the reasons for that and the possibility of redressing the situation now. Drawing on contemporary paintings, images from the Illustrated London News, comparative material from France and Britain and some recent attempts to find closure for the Irish in a world where Famine is still prevalent, Catherine will look at the shortcomings of visual representation and issues around patronage, as well as inherited feelings of guilt, repression, outrage and sorrow. Catherine Marshall is an art historian. Currently Joint-Editor of Volume V of the Royal Irish Academy's Irish Art and Architecture Project, she is on a three-year secondment from the Irish Museum of Modern Art where she has been Head of Collections since 1995. She has lectured in the History of Art at Trinity College, Dublin, U.C.D. and the National College of Art and Design and was recently responsible for the Visual Art and Architecture projects within the Arts Council's Touring Experiment.

TUESDAY THE 12TH OF MAY

Pageant as Gaeilge,

ORGANISER: Gaelscoil Dr. Uí Shuilleabháin Sciobairín.

7pm Skibbereen Heritage Centre Courtyard

Cleas Mhic Gearalt is a drama performed by the 3rd-6th class pupils of Gaelscoil Dr. Uí Shuilleabháin, An Sciobairín. They recently won an award at the Comórtas Gael Linn in Fermoy. The drama tells the story of a family forced to 'Down-size' residence during the Famine due to inability to pay the rent. A nine- year contract is drawn up for this new residence but Tomás Mac Gearalt comes up with a way of extending the duration of the lease by bending the law rather than breaking it. Features music and singing as well as excellent acting by the young cast.

WEDNESDAY THE 13TH OF MAY

Talk

ORGANISER: Gary White Deer

7pm West Cork Hotel

The Choctaw Nation and the Irish Famine

When the Choctaw of Oklahoma heard of mass eviction and starvation in Ireland, echoes of their own suffering opened their hearts. Although new to American money, they donated $179, an amount worth €68,500 in today's terms. Newspapers of the day reported the donation as "a widow's mite from the Choctaw, the children of the forest" It was an act of one poor, dispossessed people reaching out to help another and so the Irish-Choctaw Famine link was forged.

Presentations/Talks

ORGANISER: West Cork Development Partnership

2-3.30pm at Co-Action Building, Mardyke.

Food & The Famine

A set of presentations examining our ability to feed ourselves in extreme circumstances, both here in Ireland and around the globe. Declan Waugh from Partnership for Change will explore the impact of Climate Change on world famine and will present a number of projects that have set out to combat its effect. Ivan McCutcheon from West Cork Development Partnership will look at our ability to feed ourselves in Ireland in a crisis situation, asking for how many days we could stock the supermarket shelves with anything other than meat and dairy products. You will have an opportunity to taste the infamous Soyer's soup (by all accounts a mis-guided 19th century Jamie Oliver) and consider what would we eat and cook on a euro a day.

Talk

ORGANISER: Declan Waugh

4.30pm Gorta Shop Market Street

Climate change and its implications for world famine

The 21st century will likely be defined by three overarching forces: climate change, peak oil and famine. December of this year will be a defining moment in human history: either progress is made at the UN Climate Conference in Copenhagen on tackling climate change or humanity will enter a disastrous period of decline ending in famine and environmental collapse.

Either of these two realities are available to humanity at this time. As we commemorate those lost and the survivors of the great famine of Ireland of 1845-1852 we know only too clearly how famine can devastate a country and its people. This talk and short presentation will show how Partnership for Change a new initiative established by Declan Waugh Environmental Scientist and native of Skibbereen is attempting to address the issue head on and will give examples of innovative programmes it has sponsored in developing countries in 2009.
